

PRESIDENT NEARS CAPITAL PLEASD WITH CAMPAIGN

May Make Several More Hurred Sallies Before November 8th

HE IS CONGRATULATED

President Now Disposed To A Blood-and-Steel Type of Campaign

By George E. Durno
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 6.—Highly satisfied with his campaign trip into his native state of Iowa, President Hoover returned to the White House this morning.

The trip was so successful Mr. Hoover undoubtedly will decide to make several further sallies into the mid-West during the remainder of October.

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL ENROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(INS)—President Hoover neared Washington this morning, bringing to a close an initial campaign trip that was so successful he unquestionably will be inspired to make several more this final month.

Ohio, probably Columbus, most likely will serve as a setting for another such vigorous address as he delivered Tuesday night at Des Moines. Other points in the battleground territory of the midwest that have been mentioned include Indianapolis, St. Louis or Kansas City, Detroit and Minneapolis. The President is expected to make at least two more major sallies out of Washington before election day. It is even possible he may finally decide to undertake a last-minute whirlwind tour that will carry him to the west coast.

Furthermore, Mr. Hoover is now disposed to a blood-and-steel type of campaign, rather than the milk-and-water variety he had waged up to the start of the Des Moines trip. His action in oratorically wading into Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Speaker John N. Garner with both fists brought him salves of applause and a perfect deluge of congratulatory telegrams. From now until November 8, he intends to make of himself a "fighting president."

At Des Moines, the executive denied flatly the truth of certain of the statements Governor Roosevelt has been making about farm relief and tariff, and challenged the whole of Garner's leadership of the Democratic majority in the House. Yesterday, at Ft. Wayne, Ind., he branded as "deliberate, intolerable falsehoods," the "widespread personal misrepresentations" which have been promulgated in the middle West in the past few weeks, about him.

Mr. Hoover admitted to his cheering audience that these were "harsh words" he was saying, but he has told friends since that he uttered them not for vote-getting effect but because he felt there was such a thing as sportsmanship even in politics. His coat is off and his sleeves are rolled up from now on if personalities are to be indulged in.

Like all presidents, Mr. Hoover is surrounded by the usual quota of "yes-men" who bring him in glowing political reports from all sections of the country. In the past ten days, however, his more outspoken friends who have been touring the country have warned him he must go down the home stretch in high if the Republican ticket is to win in November. They have pleaded with the President that only he, through personal appearances and vigorous speeches, can swing the tide in certain sections.

These latter reports, plus the highly cordial reception he received throughout Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, are believed to have finally persuaded a decision to get out and campaign in the old-fashioned manner. The President learned the first three days of this week that he has nothing to fear from crowds and that they will turn out enthusiastically wherever he appears, giving close attention to what he says.

Dense Smoke From Stove Creates Mill St. Fire Scare

Mill street merchants were given a fire scare shortly before noon today when smoke poured from the Steinberg Novelty Store, 213 Mill street. Consolidated Fire Department quickly responded and members groping their way through the dense smoke succeeded in getting to the basement. No blaze was discovered except that in a small bucket-a-day stove.

Mr. Steinberg said that when he first discovered the smoke it was coming from the basement. "I tried to turn on the lights to get down the cellar to see what the trouble was, but the lights would not go on."

The only damage done was that to the Steinberg stock as the result of smoke. The store and dwelling portion of the premises were filled with a heavy smoke which it is believed might have been due to a back draft setting fire to a few cartons and boxes in the basement.

PROGRESS IN HOME MISSIONARY WORK SHOWN AS SECRETARIES OF BRISTOL GROUP SOCIETIES GIVE REPORTS AT QUARTERLY MEETINGS HERE

Fifty Women Entertained at Luncheon by Members of Bristol M. E. Church

The department secretaries furnished excellent reports and accounts of their work at the afternoon meeting of the quarterly sessions, Woman's Home Missionary Society of Bristol Group, in the Bristol M. E. Church, yesterday.

These reports were given by: Junior, Mrs. Rita Markle; young people, Mrs. Frank Berkheiser; mite boxes, Mrs. Walter Sebastian; thank offering, Mrs. J. Robertson; spiritual life, Mrs. George Lunnier; literature, Mrs. Samuel Reedy; Deaconess Home, Mrs. H. Milford; Needlework Circle, Mrs. H. Budenz; conference, Mrs. Byron W. Seibert.

"Mites are mighty," said Mrs. Sebastian in her report of mite box work, as she advocated a penny a day for the worthy missionary projects. Mrs. Sebastian advised that this method is an excellent one by which to meet budgets. Monthly mite box meetings were also stressed, in order that funds might be received regularly.

In her accounts of Thank Offerings, Mrs. Robertson told that these are "gifts out of gratitude of the heart," and of the good done by such.

The report of the literature secretary, Mrs. Reedy, was also instructive, this officer telling of the manner in which a missionary society deteriorates when it comes to the point where a budget means only a set of figures. "A good way to offset this feeling is to get in closer contact with real missionary work by reading of the needs and what is being done everywhere to offset such needs," she added.

"The personal contact of the workers is what counts," Mrs. Milford told in her account of the Deaconess Home activities. She asked for donations for the home, telling that last year approximately $3,000 was saved in the expenses of the home by donations of canned goods from the many missionary societies.

The work of the Needlework Circle was ably told of by Mrs. Budenz, who spoke of the great need for clothing, and household linens.

A conference member was described by Mrs. Milford as a member of the Conference Missionary Society in a church where there is no local society.

Expression of appreciation of the fine hospitality shown and the abundant luncheon served by the women of the local church was made in a rising vote of thanks by the 50 women attending.

Mrs. Seibert presided throughout the two meetings, also delivering a most helpful address at the morning meeting.

The Bristol Group of societies includes: Bristol, Langhorne, Newtown, Somerton, and Scottsville.

ESTATE WORTH $40,000

Miss Mary S. Burroughs, of Buckingham, who died on October 1, in her will filed in the Register of Wills office at Doylestown, displayed a charitable spirit for local institutions, friends, church organizations and hospitals.

The charitable bequests are $5000 to the Abington Memorial Hospital; the sum of $1000 to the dental department of the Jefferson College Hospital in Philadelphia, and a bequest of $5000 to the Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia for the establishment of a bed to be known as the Mary S. To the trustees of the non-denominational Protestant Chapel at Mechanicsville, Miss Burroughs left $1000, with the provision that it be used to pay for the services of the minister to preach the sermon. A fee of $10, it was stipulated, shall be paid the clergyman, not any more nor less, according to the will.

The Bucks County Historical Society of the State of Pennsylvania was given the sum of $1000, and Miss Burroughs also provided for a bequest of $2000 to the Bala Home for Aged Couples and Single Men. To the Presbyterian Home for Aged Widows and Single Women she gave another bequest of $2000, and the American Bible Society will receive a similar amount, it was stated. The Laurel Hill Cemetery was bequeathed $500.

James R. Hansell, an employee of the family, was bequeathed the farm containing 102 acres. Upon the death of Hansell the farm will be handed down to his son, George C. Hansell. A cousin, Alexander L. M. Dingee, was bequeathed the residue of the estate.

To William Ross Proctor, of New York City, Miss Burroughs bequeathed a portrait, painted by Copley of her great grandfather and great grandmother, John and Susanna Proctor.

Two cousins, Lillie B. VanDyck and Anna W. VanDyck Farr, in addition to bequests of clothing, jewels and silver, were given $5000 apiece.

In a codicil added to the document, which was written in May, 1923, the executor, Morris R. Brockius, Philadelphia attorney, was given 9 shares of stock in the Philadelphia Girard National Bank.

Curtiss-Wright Ships 24 Planes to Turkey

W. F. Goulding, vice-president of Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, announces the shipment to Turkey of 24 Curtiss Hawks, powered by the new 700 horse-power Wright Cyclone engines. These planes have a top speed of over 200 miles per hour, and have proved to have exceptional all-around performance in tests recently conducted at Buffalo, New York, where the planes were constructed by Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company. This is the first time that military airplanes built in this country have been exported to Turkey.

The Turkish Curtiss Hawks are equipped with the new type Curtiss single strut landing gear, a great advancement over all previous types used. The outer part of the fairing covering the wheel is cut away so that the wheel can be removed without first detaching the fairing, thus obtaining all the advantages of wheel fairings without the disadvantages experienced heretofore.

The power plants, the new Wright Cyclone F engine, recently received an Approved Type Certificate from the U. S. Department of Commerce with a rating of 700 horsepower. This engine weighs only 1,22 lbs. per horsepower, the lightest weight yet achieved in production aviation engine construction. It is likewise the most powerful single row air-cooled radial production aviation engine being built today.

Mr. Goulding further states that the shipment of these 24 Curtiss Hawks is only part of a large aviation program being worked out by the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation and the Turkish Government, which includes the development of factory operations at the Turkish airplane manufacturing plant at Kayseri, where Curtiss Hawk Pursuit airplanes and Curtiss Fiedling Training planes will be manufactured. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation also furnished technical personnel to the Turkish Government to assist them in establishing service stations and giving instruction on the proper care and service of Curtiss airplanes and Wright engines.

A WORTHY EFFORT

Teachers in the public schools of Bristol are to be commended for their voluntary offer to contribute a percentage of their salary each month for the relief of needy children.

A survey shows that many of the school children are undernourished and have lost considerably in weight during the past year. The school nurse and school physician are now checking the physical condition of the children and some of their discoveries are said to be startling.

It is the tentative plan of the teachers to administer their relief fund for the benefit of school children who are in need of better nourishment, clothing and medical attention.

Some children are attending school without having a proper morning meal. Others are not eating a mid-day lunch and still others are in need of clothing and shoes in order to properly be protected from the weather experienced during the winter months.

The money contributed by the teachers will go far toward giving those things to the children whose state of health during their years of adolescence will determine the physical welfare of future generations.

It is a most worthy and commendable work and the teachers are to be congratulated upon the effort.

THE JOY OF CREATION

Hubert T. Parson, at the head of one of the greatest retail merchandising establishments in the world, says: "The sole economic purpose of business is to provide a service to the public. If it does not do that it is economic waste."

The modern business spirit has caught the significance of a word which once was the property of masters, slaves and preachers. Service now is spelled in big letters by the best business institutions of the country.

The idea still needs to be rescued fully from its association with humiliation and raised to a place of pride. It is not enough that the administrator should realize that the business organization must stand for service in the community. The full benefit of the motive will not be realized until every last man and woman on the job catches the inspiration and measures up to it.

There is a prevalent notion that the pride and joy of creation died out with the men who cleared the forests and single-handed founded their homes in the wilderness with the hand-craftsmen who shaped their products into completion by slow methods of the carpenter's bench; with the wagon maker who steamed the wood and bent the felloes and ironed off the wheel in the primitive shop.

The workman of today should be able to catch, and often does catch a farther vision of service. The old wagon maker, working alone, turned out a wagon in the course of a winter; the modern workman, co-operating with thousands of his fellows, and receiving the co-operation of the capital savings of many others, sees the work of his hands daily eventuating in the production of thousands of vehicles of vastly greater usefulness.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXVII.

IT was a poor night when Flora McCordle didn't have somebody to take her out, but accidents will happen.

One Saturday night, two weeks after Carmen, she tapped at Daphne's door. "Doing anything special?"

Daphne laid down her darning and yawned. "Not a thing. Ralph is seeing some man as usual."

"Get your hat, and we'll take in the movie, I've got a couple of passes!"

They stopped at a candy-store for caramels on the way, and Flora chewed steadily through five reels, crumpling the paper bag, and sighing at intervals. "God what's the use of two females pretending to have any fun alone? Isn't this a rotten picture? If I'd thought it was going to be this punk I'd a stayed home!" But Daphne enjoyed every moment of it, and walked up the aisle in a beautiful daze when it was over, lost in dreams of love and romance.

Flora had to nudge her twice. "Right ahead—the tall fellow in gray!"

She followed Flora's pointing finger. Walking down the aisle, not two feet ahead of them, was Ralph, and a girl. The girl raised slender, beautiful hands, and adjusted her small close-fitting hat. As she turned her head Daphne saw the line of her cheek, the crisp yellow curls under the green hat. She clutched Flora's arm convulsively.

Ralph . . . and Crystal Garroty! Flora chattered all the way home in the street car, but Daphne hardly heard a word. She was praying wordlessly, "Don't let me be jealous . . . don't let me believe bad things about Ralph . . . make me believe in him, as I want to do."

The young man in gray, and the girl with the green hat, made their way leisurely out of the theatre.

"Want to go somewhere and dance?" he asked.

Crystal looked down at her trim tailor suit. "Can't, I'm not dressed up."

"Want to go somewhere and eat?"

She shook her head, laughing. "No, I don't want anything for once in my life. Just take me home, Ralph. I'm awfully tired, and I have an early class in the morning."

"That's a polite hint for me to escort you to the doorstep and run," he said moodily.

"Ralph, it isn't! You know I always love to see you, but tonight is an exception of course. Every night is an exception lately. Out of town two weeks, and as soon as you get back you're tired. First you're living in a hotel, and I can talk to you in the lobby. Now you have an apartment, and . . . can come up and spend the evening next week, or the week after next!"

"Honey, you know that isn't true. It isn't kind of you to talk that way. Oh, I wish I were stronger—I wish I didn't get so terribly tired after my day at school—I'm a false alarm. I don't blame you—who wants to bother with a sickly thing like me?" She began to cry, dabbing at her eyes with a scented handkerchief.

"You're strong enough to run around with the hobo-hemians!" She sniffed pathetically. "If you call night classes running around with hobo-hemians! Oh, I don't blame you. I've been nothing but a nuisance to you ever since I came here, borrowing money, and working so hard that I haven't any time to see you."

"There's nobody there," she cried quickly. Too quickly.

"Goodnight, see you soon," he mumbled, and started the motor. In a moment he'd be gone. Gone forever. And checks and dinners, and theatre tickets gone with him. . . . Why couldn't she think of something to keep him? Damn Avery . . . oh, what a fool to get hardly, and getting sick—and not doing so well in my work as I want to!" One hand was clutching the lapel of his coat, her head went down on his shoulder. He could feel her sobbing, feel her heart fluttering against his side. But he drove on silently, steeling himself against her.

The car stopped in front of her apartment on California Street. "You might as well stop crying, and get out," he said gruffly. He made no move to help her. He kept his place at the wheel, looking straight ahead.

He was so cold and hard. For the first time she was really frightened. She held on to his hand, thinking desperately. If she could be sure that the coast was clear upstairs . . . if she could bring Ralph upstairs and jolly him along a bit, without running the risk of Avery Woodward dropping in . . . the lamp was lighted, the curtains drawn . . . Had she left the light burning? Or had Avery come in? If only she could be sure . . . damn Avery, always bobbing up at the wrong time . . .

"Don't keep your friends waiting," Ralph said with fine sarcasm, following her furtive glance to the lighted windows.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rain' to Go

If you feel sour and sick and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for Liver Pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

News Items From Bucks County Towns

Commerce. Wambold will assist Chief of Police James Schatz who under normal conditions, has been the borough's lone officer.

Wambold was hired at a salary of $25 a week. He was formerly a constable, and at one time held a private detective's license. For a number of years, and up to the present time, he has been patrolling the streets of Perkasie as a privately retained officer, not on the borough payroll, but depending upon a fund created by the merchants for his salary. Each of the merchants who felt that more protection was needed paid a dollar a week, which was turned over to Wambold for his work of guarding the streets at night.

An autopsy performed yesterday disclosed a cerebral hemorrhage as the cause of the death of Herman Nagel, a member of the football team at the National Farm School, near New Britain, who succumbed in the Jewish Hospital, Philadelphia, Monday night.

Nagel's collapse was a complete mystery to physicians until the autopsy was performed, and it was agreed that he had come to his death from a natural cause. For a time it was feared that Nagel might have suffered some injury in football practice, but he had apparently never been hurt, which added to the mystery surrounding the cause of his death.

The youth, who was twenty years old, was suddenly taken sick on Thursday of last week, and on Saturday he was removed to the hospital, where his condition baffled the attending physicians.

Nagel was the center on the varsity football team and was also a student of outstanding merit at the Farm School. Funeral services were held today at Nagel's home in Brooklyn.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By "COLONEL" GOODBODY

SARDINE SEASON

THIS is the time of year when they're fishing for sardines off Norway. From June 1st to October 1st the clear cold waters of the North Sea are headquarters for "sprat" fishermen. The Norwegians speak of the tiny fish as "brillings." Translated into English that word is "sprat," although here in the United States we call the popular little fish "sardines."

The mountainous rugged coast of Norway makes it easy to understand why the schools of sardines go there. The seacoast is jugged with fjords or little bays and into these waters the small fry of the sea swim for safety. The open ocean is too dangerous a place for these little fellows; whales drive them out of the open water to the shelter of the deep coastal bays.

Sardines or "brillings," as the Norwegians call them, are caught by large seine nets, which are carried out around the fish by small boats. Then the fish are hurried to canning factories where they're immediately washed and then put into brine. They remain in the brine bath only about half an hour. Then comes the smoking room. The fish get a light smoking, just enough to preserve them perfectly; not enough to discolor their beautiful silvery skins.

After the fish are smoked they're sorted for size. Then a small quantity of olive oil is put in each little can and girls pack the fish in by hand. Lids go on the cans, the cans are labeled and equipped with their "open sesame" in the shape of sardine keys. The sardine is ready to go out into the world!

For my part, when a can of these delicious little fellows comes my way, I know just what to do with it. I convert it into one of the best light dishes man ever ate—baked sardines on toast.

Try this on your Sunday night supper table!

Baked Sardines on Toast

2 cans Blue Peter Sardines
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Clove of garlic or slice of onion
Toast
Drain the oil from the sardines; add to it the butter, lemon juice, garlic or onion, and heat the mixture. Arrange the sardines on thin slices of toast. Bake in a moderate oven for about 10 minutes or until thoroughly heated, basting several times with the old mixture. This recipe makes 4 servings.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

NO TROUBLE FOR MAGICIAN TO SPIN AN EGG

Take a hard-boiled egg, put a small identifying mark on it and place it in a bowl of eggs that have not been boiled. Bring the bowl before an audience and ask some one to select an egg and spin it on end. It will be found impossible to make the egg with soft yolks spin, while the performer will find it easy to spin the one that is hard boiled.

B. H. S. PREPARES TO MEET LANGHORNE XI.

By Oscar Corn

After having received a good shelling from the Glassboro high eleven, the practice game held last Friday, the Cardinal and Gray team is now about ready to meet the superb eleven from Langhorne High, tomorrow at home.

The Cardinal and Gray mentor, Coach Dougherty, has determined that the inability of the line cost us last week's practice game. Therefore, this week the linemen on the squad were continuously drilled on all points of blocking, tackling and charging. They now appear to be much improved in these departments.

Coaches Dougherty and Brown have as yet not decided the starting line-up of this first home and scheduled game. Probably the same team which started the Glassboro game will start tomorrow.

This year Langhorne has a good football eleven. They are being taught a new system by their Coach, Beck, who has lately taken up a coaching course at Villanova, under one of the All-American "four horsemen." This has proven successful and they will come here with the idea of getting the local boys' scalps. Therefore tomorrow's game will surely prove interesting.

Yesterday the varsity scrimmaged with both the second team and the Jay Vees. They ripped open many gaping holes, and gained many yards. Their plays worked smoothly and the blocking and tackling was good.

Tomorrow the team will go out with the determination to win or die trying.

DECEPTIVE PLAY IS OF GREAT VALUE

By Dick Hanley

(Football Coach, Northwestern University)

(Written Expressly for I. N. S.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(INS)—An offensive move in football which befuddled the defense or misleads it as to where the play is actually to hit is characterized as a deceptive play.

Much time is spent by football teams in building up their offense in order to get their opponents to fear a certain strong phase of attack. Once a team has its opponent in this state of mind the stage is set for the deceptive play. A team shows by actual movements or by bluffing that it is apparently going to hit a certain spot. The play starts and as it develops it eventually hits a spot totally unexpected by the defense. In fact, the defense has weakened this particular locality in order to fortify another point where the thrust was expected.

Deceptive plays are always intriguing. In this category must be placed the most deceptive of all plays, the spinner. A great many coaches have been given credit for the origin of this play. Consequently I was interested last summer, while making a series of football movie shorts, to hear that famous coach, Judge Walter Steffen, of Carnegie Tech, explain his first experience with a play of this type.

This is the way the judge explained it.

"In 1924 Carnegie Tech was playing Washington and Jefferson and our opponents were using the Warner type of double wing back offensive. They had a very dangerous runner playing the left wing back. One of their basic plays was where he ran with the ball after it was handed to him by the full back on a reverse.

"Carnegie felt that in stopping him it stopped the opponents' offense. Our coach had advised us that we could detect by this man's action when he was going to carry the ball on this particular play. Consequently we arranged to have our defensive end play as close to him as possible, and to dive across the line of scrimmage when the ball was passed and grab him whenever it appeared that he was going to carry the ball.

"Upon one of these occasions our end knocked him down before he actually received the ball from the fullback, and the fullback with no one left to pass the ball to, looked about him for something to do. He spun around while retaining the ball and ran through Carnegie's line 40 yards unnoticed before the safety man finally tackled him."

For some time the judge gave his opponents credit for a new play, but after the game he learned from the opposing coach that it had merely been an accident. His honor, however, wasted no time in working this play into his own offense and it became a basic part of his attack at Carnegie Tech.

Tech.

While Carnegie Tech did not use the double wing formation it conceived a reverse play in which the end carried the ball around. Judge Steffen found that by having the ball passed to the fullback in plain view and by having him carry the ball high in his hand he could at the same time charge viciously into the line. Then, as he reached the line, he turned slowly and pretended to pass the ball to the end, who in turn appeared to receive it on the regular reverse play.

The Old Guard Marches On

By HARDIN BURNLEY

—DOBIE and STAGG—

—GREAT COACHES WHO HAVE BEEN HANDICAPPED IN THE PAST BY POOR MATERIAL—THIS YEAR, HOWEVER, PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHTER FOR BOTH OF THEM!

—STAGG—

—HIS PROMISING CHICAGO ELEVEN PLAYS YALE SATURDAY!

SINCE the end of the 1931 football season, many startling things have happened to the greatest of all autumn games. Last year there were many fatalities. This year, members of the rules committee think there will be far fewer.

More easily than the veteran mentors, the younger coaches adapt themselves to changes in the game. Graduates of All-American teams of the past decade or so, coaching now throughout the country, could reasonably be expected to take their young players over the hurdles imposed by the new rules without much trouble.

But how, observers ask, will the new regulations affect the tutelage of the old guard of football coaches, the Grand Old Men of the game? The answer is that some of them may be confused and baffled, but that the thoroughbreds—notably Alonzo Stagg and Gil Dobie—stand on the threshold of a year which is likely to add new lustre to their already glittering crowns as teachers of football.

Throughout the Western Conference the talk is that Old Man Stagg, whose teams for the past few years have done no more than provide mild workouts for Michigan, Indiana, Purdue and Wisconsin, is coming through this fall.

"You'll hear a lot more about the old man before Thanksgiving," the sharps of the Middle West have been reciting.

The reason is not that the beloved Chicago leader will have an advantage under the new rules. It is a fact that they won't interfere with his strategy. But the Old Man of the Midway, who has been coaching for more than forty years, this year has the material. He hasn't had any for five or six years up to now. But with a strong, fast, bruising backfield and a ripping, fast-charging line (and those little matters are fairly well taken care of, even at this early date), Chicago is going to be no mere trial horse for the rest of the Conference. Stagg trots his eleven out against Yale Saturday, and while a victory against the Blue would hardly be a complete proof of the pudding, it would be a fairly good barometer, whose teams for the past few years have done no more than provide mild workouts for Michigan, Indiana, Purdue and Wisconsin, is coming through this fall.

This year, with Switzer, Hened, Viviano and Ferraro to lug the leather, Dobie has the Eastern end of the football circuit wondering just what strength he may develop. Already there are rumblings that Dobie's squad is the one to watch. Dobie, as usual, has been pessimistic. But behind his frowns, followers of the game think there is a feeling—and a determination—that the Big Red Tornado is about to break out. If it does, watch out!

Consider these Cold facts

WINTER is just around the corner. And when we think of winter, we think of ways to defeat its inconveniences.

The most effective relief is—heat! This is not a generalization—it is an axiom of personal experience. There is no substitute for heat.

'And heat costs money!

You already know this, of course. But perhaps right now it has added significance.

Most people have a pretty vivid recollection of the number of fuel tons used for home-heat last year. They expect to use about the same number this year. They hope it will not be more. But tons are mere measures of fuel—not the most important consideration by any means. Even if it were tons burned, Koppers Coke would be a fiery contestant.

Not tons burned but dollars spent

And dollars saved! That's the thing. The Rainey-Wood Coke Company makes this unqualified statement to you:

This year you can have better heat than you have ever enjoyed before, with less labor and other furnace troubles—and save 15% to 20% on your fuel-bill!

How? It is an easy answer—Koppers Rainey-Wood Coke! This is not an unsupported statement. Thousands of fuel-purchasers enthusiastically confirm this as their experience. In the summer of 1932 all records for advance deliveries of Koppers Coke were broken. Today an unprecedented volume of orders for this superior fuel is pouring in—from old customers and new customers alike.

HERE ARE SOME OF THE REASONS FOR THIS FUEL-PREFERENCE:

KOPPERS RAINEY-WOOD COKE

costs less • gives quick heat • gives good, steady heat • has less dust • less dirt • is always the same quality • banks easily • has less ashes • burns in every type of furnace • is lighter, cleaner—easier for women to use • saves steps, saves labor.

Don't deny yourself ideal heat any longer—demand that every fuel-dollar deliver 100% heat. Burn Koppers Coke—your heat benefits will rise and your fuel-costs will fall! Rainey-Wood Coke Company, Conshohocken, Pa.
